Some of the most important super pollinators include bees, butterflies, moths, hummingbirds, and bats. They play a vital role in the reproduction of many plant.

Super pollinators are animals that are particularly effective at pollinating plants. They have long tongues, which allow them to reach deep into flowers and collect nectar. Super pollinators are very active, visiting many flowers in a day.

Bees are the most well-known super pollinators. There are over 20,000 species of bees in the world. They pollinate a wide range of plants, including fruits, vegetables, and nuts. Bees are essential for the production of many of our food crops, and their decline is a major concern.

Butterflies and moths are important pollinators. There are over 17,000 species of butterflies and moths in the world. They pollinate a wide range of plants, including flowers, trees, and shrubs. Butterflies and moths are particularly important for pollinating native plants, which are often overlooked by other pollinators.

Hummingbirds are important pollinators and are particularly attracted to red and orange flowers. Hummingbirds are also important for the pollination of native plants.

Bats are the only mammals that can fly. They're important pollinators in many parts of the world. Bats are particularly attracted to white and pale-colored flowers, and are often the only pollinators of these flowers.

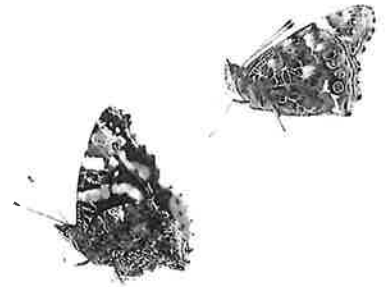

Super pollinators are essential for the reproduction of many plants, and their decline could have serious consequences for our food supply. You can help protect these important animals, such as planting bee-friendly plants and avoiding the use of pesticides.

Here are some tips to help you attract super pollinators to your garden:

- Plant bee-friendly plants,
- Avoid using pesticides.
- Leave some dead leaves and branches in your garden.
- Provide a water source for pollinators.
- Build a bee hotel or bat house.

ST. BRUNO CHURCH CEMETERY GROUNDS

Dear Families or our Dearly Departed

It has come to the attention of Fr. Pius and the St. Bruno Parish Council, that the maintenance of the Cemetery Grounds has become a very cumbersome task for the Groundskeepers. We kindly and respectfully remind families and friends to keep in mind that the guidelines of the Bruno Cemetery are:

“Any decorations, solar lights, flowers, etc. that you place by a “Loved One’s” headstone or grave, must be placed within the perimeter of the cement pad.”
If anything is in the pathway of where the lawn mower or whipper snipper has to run, your items might get damaged in the process.

St. Bruno Parish and the Groundskeepers will not be held responsible to replace any items, should they get damaged in the process of this general maintenance.

Please be aware, that items that are placed outside the cement perimeter will be removed.

If anyone has any questions, please call Fr. Pius Schroh

MASS INTENTIONS

If you wish to have a mass intention for a loved one, please contact Fr. Pius Schroh to arrange.
